Distinguished Teaching Award

Rules and Regulations

First: Introduction

As an institution for higher education and scientific research, the University aims to shape and develop students' skills in terms of professional, analytical, and intellectual capabilities. The University also aims to enrich knowledge through deductive reasoning, creative research, preserving community heritage, and protecting its values. Teaching is one of the University's core activities in achieving these objectives. By means of a distinguished teaching process, advanced students achieve their qualifications and students' aspiration for learning and research is consolidated. Within the framework of such a process, the lecturer provides a good example to his/her students.

The University attaches great importance to the teaching process by choosing the best and most proficient human factors to join the teaching staff. The University also works on training selected national staff members to be sent, through scholarship programs, to the most prestigious universities in the world. In addition, the University strives to provide various material resources from lecture halls, laboratories and libraries to multi-functional technical facilities that aid in the teaching process. Despite the fact that distinguished teaching is a special talent, it can be acquired and progressed to a high and effective level through the hard work lecturers put into preparing the materials, developing and improving the utilization of sessions and office meetings, interacting creatively with students in session rooms, seminars, research projects, labs, and other tools of teaching and training.

As a way of assuring the importance of teaching, the University has set up a range of regulations and systems that stipulate this competency as a basic condition upon which teaching staff members are appointed and promoted. It is also the basis for renewal of their contracts. Competency then is the main factor in the annual evaluation of staff members' performance. The awarding system—that was devised to recognize outstanding members of staff—crowns the University's aims to achieve its ultimate goals by adopting the best teaching techniques and methods. Moreover, it is regarded as an incentive for all to develop the teaching process.

Second: Award Objectives

Appreciation Awards, presented for distinguished teaching and methodology, is the way in which the University expresses appreciation of the teaching performance level demonstrated by the winners. It is also recognition for their great efforts in helping students to qualify, developing their competency, motivating their aspiration for learning, knowledge and scientific research, and implanting professional, social and moral values in them. The award represents a symbol of the University's attention to the teaching process and how important the role of the lecturer is.

Third: The Rules

1. The nomination and selection process for the awards involve all teaching staff members in all faculty and the language tutors in the Language Center at the University of Kuwait.
2. Nomination application forms can be submitted by the individuals themselves, or by their relative scientific department.

3. A maximum of two annual awards are allocated to each faculty and the Language Center.
4. The awarded members become re-eligible for the awards after the laps of four years.
5. No annual awards will be granted to candidates who do not meet the specified conditions.
6. The University has the sole right to determine the appropriate way in which the winners are honored.

Fourth: Nomination Criteria

1. The Quantitative Analysis (Q), a task for the Department Committee (see Fifth section, item 3). (30% of the overall assessment)
2. The Department Committee report (D), a task for the Department Committee. (see Fifth section, item 4). (20% of the overall assessment)
3. The Teaching Portfolio (P), a task for the Faculty Committee. (see Fifth section, item 5). (50% of the overall assessment)

The final overall assessment is an aggregate of (Q+D+P) and the candidate will be given the award if he/she gets 80% or more.

Fifth: Required Data and Documents

The candidate or the nominating party is responsible for submitting data and documents that authenticate the nominees' participation and their outstanding achievement in teaching activity at Kuwait University . These documents are as follows:

1. Nomination application form (Prepared by the candidate)
2. A personal report written by the candidate (2-5) pages in which he/she explain their methodology and teaching techniques and how they can share in developing and promoting the teaching process.
3. Teaching timetable and the number of registered students for each course.
4. Quantitative Analysis form (Prepared by the Department Committee)
 - a. The candidate's teaching evaluation results for his/her assigned courses as recorded by the Evaluation and Measurement Center. This applies to all courses evaluated during the last two academic years only. A minimum of six results are required (excluding candidates whose faculty curriculum may not permit such a number of evaluations, or if the candidate is in charge of an administrative position at Kuwait University). In such cases, a minimum of four results are required and the candidate must submit evidence as justification for such an exception).

- b. The teacher's average assessment (T) and the average of the highest marks in the faculty (F) are calculated. Results of such calculations are added to the aggregate results taken from the Evaluation and Assessment Center that are submitted for all courses evaluated in the last two years.
- c. The quantity (Q) is calculated as follows:

$$Q = T/F \times 100 \times 30\%$$

(30% of overall assessment)

- a. A report on the candidate's teaching activity describing his/her record in attending seminars, discussion forums, practical training, departmental meetings and committees. In addition, the report should demonstrate the candidate's commitment to the teaching timetable and office hours.

- b. The candidate's evaluation by each member of the department three-member committee (each member is allocated 5%), which is included in the quantity calculation (D) (that represents 20%). So the quantity (D) is calculated as 15% for the departmental three-member committee evaluation + 5% for the department report of the candidate's academic activities.

(3 x 5% of the final overall assessment)

6. The Teaching Portfolio (Prepared by the candidate) should include:

- a. C.V.
